Mystery at the Museum

Jenny and Todd were very excited. Their class was on a field trip to the museum. As they approached the entrance, they saw two fire trucks. A huge sign read: "Closed until further notice." "I wonder what has happened?" said Todd. All kinds of ideas were going through his head. "Maybe something escaped!" said Jenny. "Like what?" asked Todd. "Everything in there died millions of years ago! Could it be a child lost in the museum, and his parents are frantically searching for him?" "Then the media will be here soon," said Jenny. "We might be on the news!"

"Maybe the dinosaur bones came crashing down," said Emily. Their teacher Mrs. Anderson looked very serious after talking to a firefighter. "What happened?" asked the students, eager for news. They were very disappointed to learn that a pipe had burst in the museum's cafeteria. Todd shrugged. "I guess the television stations won't be here after all!"
